PRENUPTIAL AGREEMENTS & MATRIMONIAL PROPERTY

Family Law is different from one country to another as it is closely related to the Society.

The concept of matrimonial property itself is very specific. France does not have equitable distribution.

It would also be impossible to state in a French prenuptial agreement that your spouse will be deprived from any alimony during the divorce.

Yet, there is a possibility to choose the applicable law as allowed by the 1978 Hague Convention.

Attorney Noémie Houchet-Tran will help you interpreting French, European and International laws.

CLIENT TESTIMONIAL:

“As you have enough going on already going thru a divorce, you need it to go as smooth as it possibly can with somebody by your side that knows the legal field inside and out! She is a true gladiator in a suit.

She works fast and responses to your email in a timely manner. Thanks to her I was able to move back from Paris to the Dutch Caribbean with my little one. She will go the extra mile to make sure you are absolutely well presented with a rock hard and solid case!

An international divorce is even harder to go thru and without Noémie Houchet-Tran as my international divorce lawyer I don't think I would be where I am now”.

RELOCATION & HAGUE CASES

It is never easy to get divorced or separated. Child custody is often the most sensitive issue and especially when a relocation is at stake.

If you do not want to face charges for abduction, you will have to prepare your case very carefully. When you are the one who wants to get back home, you have to prove that the relocation serves the best interest of the child.

Attorney Noémie Houchet-Tran is a Hague specialist. She has experienced in hundreds of cases involving an abduction or a relocation and knows exactly what arguments should be defended to win a case.
